Operation Game Warden: Mekong Delta, 1965-68

During 1968 alone, Game Warden sailors earned more than 500 Purple Hearts (some men earned two or three), an astounding feat considering the tiny percentage (about one-half of one percent) of naval personnel they comprised at that time.

The Indonesian-Malaysian Confrontation (1963-1966)

During Great Britain's pullback after World War II, Britain fought several "Imperial Rearguard" campaigns in faraway corners of the empire. One of these rearguard actions, usually forgotten in the Malaya Emergency and Vietnam shadow, was the Indonesian-Malaysia Confrontation.

The Second Chechen War

Russia's failed attempt to regain control of Chechnya in the First Chechen War ended in August 1996. Following the withdrawal of Russian forces, the situation in Chechnya failed to improve. By 1999, the Russians were better prepared, and an opportunity to intervene grew out of conflict in neighboring Dagestan.
